Marianna Evenstein

Marianna Evenstein is an American broadcast journalist, moderator and media trainer who has been based in Germany for more than a decade. Her experience ranges from TV and radio work, to corporate events, round-table/podium discussions and press-conferences. In addition, Marianna has worked many years for Germany's public broadcaster Deutsche Welle, which has given her deep insights into the international media landscape.

Prior to her work in journalism, Marianna spent several years working as a PR consultant in a number of global public relations and marketing firms both in Germany and in the US. Her experience on both sides of the media landscape – PR and broadcast journalism – makes Marianna especially suited for preparing clients for encounters with the media as well as optimizing their overall communication skills.

In addition to English, Marianna also speaks fluent German. All courses offered by medietrainer berlin can therefore take place in either German or English, or, if desired, in both languages. Marianna specializes in preparing German clients for English-language interviews or presentations, as well as preparing English-speaking clients ahead of their encounters with the German media or ahead of German-language presentations.
